ALL INDIA ONLINE ART EXHIBITION
2025

"Art takes birth from your own concept, not everyone needs to follow others"

True art emerges from an individual's own thoughts, emotions, and experiences rather than from imitation. Each artist possesses a distinct way of seeing the world, shaped by personal journeys, observations, and inner reflections. When creativity is guided by one's own concept, the artwork becomes honest and meaningful, carrying a sense of authenticity that cannot be replicated. While influences may exist, blindly following others often limits originality and weakens personal expression. Genuine artistic growth occurs when artists trust their inner voice and allow ideas to develop naturally. Such freedom of thought leads to works that are unique, expressive, and timeless, resonating with viewers through sincerity, depth, and creative individuality.

About The Exhibition- "Fresh Wave" symbolizes the arrival of new energy, ideas, and creativity in the art world. This exhibition is exclusively dedicated to artists participating with us for the first time, celebrating originality and the spirit of new beginnings. The primary objective of this exhibition is to foster artistic collaboration across India by providing a vibrant platform for creative exchange and exposure.

A remarkable 114 artists from 19 states across India have participated in this exhibition- bringing together a rich tapestry of cultural and creative perspectives. Their diverse voices and artistic expressions reflect the unity and depth of India's contemporary art landscape. This exhibition aims to inspire emerging artists and art enthusiasts nationwide by presenting exceptional works across genres, mediums, and visual languages. As a virtual exhibition, it plays a vital role in connecting artists, curators, and art lovers, bridging distances and nurturing a shared cultural dialogue. It celebrates the spirit of unity in diversity through art, encouraging deeper understanding and creative interaction among participants.

Arvind Sharma is a printmaker based in Karnal, Haryana, whose work is deeply rooted in the social dynamics of his diverse environment. Drawing inspiration from everyday life, he explores themes of human relationships, moral conflicts, identity, and existence. His prints serve as a visual reflection of emotional responses born from societal roles and personal interactions. A graduate of Kurukshetra University, Sharma's formal training in art laid the foundation for a prolific career.

His work has been exhibited in over 20 countries and has earned recognition through more than 250 awards and exhibitions. His prints are housed in prominent collections, including the China Printmaking Museum. Alongside his practice, he contributes to art education as an Assistant Professor at Budha College of Higher Education and leads THAPPA Atelier 91, a dedicated printmaking studio fostering artistic exchange and experimentation. Through his work and teaching, Sharma continues to expand the boundaries of contemporary printmaking in India.

Arvind Sharma

Director: THAPPA Atelier 91, Karnal, India

For me, painting is a game – a game of hide-and-seek. You hide something, then you find it again; you search, you lose, you rediscover. I love playing with colours, with forms, with lines. That is the pure joy of it. Often I'm astonished by the behaviour of colour itself: how an ordinary blue suddenly turns grey under the spell of its neighbours. This endless play of hiding and finding, searching and letting go, never stops. And through it all, I feel only joy while painting. I do not pray. I do not chase some exalted state of salvation. I'm not looking for anything like that. In true play there is no goal, no fear of winning or losing. You simply play, relaxed and absorbed, enjoying the game itself. Sometimes it turns out well, sometimes it doesn't. Either way, you keep playing with confidence, untroubled.

That is what painting is to me: a continual game with colour – hide-and-seek. And in that game, the greatest delight comes when familiar things reveal themselves in entirely new forms.

A Journey Shaped by Time, Vision, and Silence...

I was born in the small village of Lasari in Punjab in 1979, and my journey in art began with my studies at the Department of Fine Arts, Kurukshetra University, where I completed my M.A. in Drawing and Painting. Over the years, I discovered that photography is a powerful creative medium—one that can preserve a fleeting moment and turn it into an everlasting memory. In 2013, a quote by Sebastião Salgado profoundly transformed my approach. His belief in long-term engagement, in understanding people and places with patience and empathy, made me realise that photography is not merely taken—it is given. This shifted my practice from simple documentation to deeper, more introspective creative exploration. Influences from masters like Henri Cartier-Bresson, Jimmy Nelson, Raghu Rai, and Steve McCurry further widened my understanding of the vast ocean that photography truly is. Today, I immerse myself in diverse series such as Emotions & Expressions, Rituals & Culture of India, Textures of Time & Space, and Alone. My ongoing coffee table book, Essence of Holy Mountains, is the result of four to five years of dedicated work. Through every frame, I aim to express what words cannot—capturing moments with honesty, sensitivity, and a vision that reflects my evolving artistic journey.

Gurdeep Dhiman

Eminent Visual Photographer, Chandigarh

My journey has long been defined by slender, elongated forms—suspended, balanced, and in motion—seeking to minimize weight, mass, and volume. In recent years, however, I have felt a growing inclination toward volume and mass, perceived through my characteristic sensitivity to the surroundings. While earlier phases reflected inner psychological turmoil, the later works turn outward, engaging with circumstantial disturbances, volatility, unstable human characters, mythological narratives, travel experiences, and the socio-political ambience. Academic naturalism remains evident in my rendering, yet it merges with an inherent lyrical and mystic mood. Though rooted in tangible reality, these figures inhabit a space between physical and metaphysical existence.

The elongated figure with worn, bony hands, stretched in a crucified posture, embodies tireless responsibility—offering rest to tiny birds, symbolizing selfless giving. Another work, an aged seated figure holding a flying flag with armed forms, presents a political commentary on Bengal's leftist milieu. The present phase evolves organically: early figures gradually gained muscularity, unconsciously leading toward volume. Animal forms revisit sensory reality while remaining deeply expressive.

Mr. Promud Boruah a prominent painter and printmaking artist hailing from Assam, draws inspiration from his childhood and whose early years were deeply immersed in the richness of nature. This profound connection with the natural world has left an indelible mark on his art, manifesting in his exploration of emotions ranging from grief to laughter, love, and joy, through his evocative paintings. Currently, his artistic journey primarily unfolds through abstract and figurative expressions in both painting and printmaking. His creations delve into themes that resonate deeply with the essence of human experience and the universe itself—from the mundane to the mystical. Boruah's work is a contemplative reflection on nature, the daily existence of humanity, the cosmic "Brahmanda" (universe), the fundamental elements of nature, the cycle of birth and death, and our attachment to illusion. By employing a diverse array of symbols, objects, and various strokes of colors, Boruah's art illustrates the magnificence of the universe and the intricate tapestry of life's cycles. Through his art, he endeavors to reveal the immense power of the "Creation", reminding us of our modest yet significant place within it. His art not only captivates the viewer aesthetically but also invites them to ponder their connection with the universe and the natural world.
